Dear Friends and Colleagues,

Let us agree that the more we are exposed to each other, the more capable we become in developing better ideas and learn how we do well.

Each year, our Meeting experiences tremendous growth. Our continuous growth and reputation are thanks to you all.

“Coming together is a beginning, keeping together is progress, working together is success” (Edward Everett Hale).

It is my honor and privilege after the success of the previous meetings, to be again a Scientific Committee President of the 14th Belgrade International Symposium on Pain (14th BISOP).

This year, we are eager to share what we believe will be our best ever program with selected Speakers as well as timely and relevant topics in pain management. I am convinced that for aspiring pain professionals this wonderful event will be full of inspiration. I also believe that new contacts will be established and that they will lead to lasting and fruitful collaborations for the benefits of our patients. The meeting this year will provide an outstanding opportunity to update the participants on latest research and treatments that will drive future directions in provision of our pain management.

Previous meetings have generated much enthusiasm, catapulting the number of participants in every meeting. We look forward to your attendance and the opportunity to learn from you.

Share the excitement with us in a relaxed and comfortable environment of Belgrade.

Belgrade calling!

And remember, Belgrade never fails to offer pleasant surprises.
